In mathematics, a fractal is a detailed, recursive, and infinitely self-similar mathematical set whose Hausdorff dimension strictly exceeds its topological dimension. Fractals are encountered ubiquitously in nature due to their tendency to appear nearly the same at different levels, as is illustrated here in the successively small magnifications of the Mandelbrot set.

Patterns in nature are visible regularities of form found in the natural world. These patterns recur in different contexts and can sometimes be modelled mathematically. Natural patterns include symmetries, trees, spirals, meanders, waves, foams, tessellations, cracks and stripes. Early Greek philosophers studied pattern, with Plato, Pythagoras and Empedocles attempting to explain order in nature.

If a someone is to help you understand FRACTAL FIELDS- centripetal life force and biologic rejuvenation (commercial proof it works: theraphi.net)- you will definitely need a scientist who knows why an object falls to the ground (thus excluding Einstein and Stephen Hawkins). Gravity is a centripetal electrical force.

It should be emphasized that, as has been shown by Fischer (1964), Pomar and Ward (1999), Goldhammer, et al, (1990), and D'Argenio et al (1997) that though shallow cycle s of carbonate are composed of a relatively conformable succession of genetically related beds or bedset s these cycle s are often truncated and incomplete so that maximum flooding and transgressive surfaces can be missing.

Electrode reaction rates and most double layer parameters are extensive quantities and have to be referred to the unit area of the interface. Knowledge of the real surface area of electrodes is therefore needed. Comparison of experimental data with theories or of experimental results for different materials and/or from different laboratories to each other is physically groundless without ...
