A great power is a sovereign state that is recognized as having the ability and expertise to exert its influence on a global scale. Great powers characteristically possess military and economic strength, as well as diplomatic and soft power influence, which may cause middle or small powers to consider the great powers' opinions before taking actions of their own.

Several periods of abrupt climate change have been identified in the paleoclimatic record. Notable examples include: About 25 climate shifts, called Dansgaard-Oeschger cycles, which have been identified in the ice core record during the glacial period over the past 100,000 years. [citation needed]The Younger Dryas event, notably its sudden end. It is the most recent of the Dansgaard-Oeschger ...
